

8. PACIFIC COAST

Rough and unexplored, that is what characterizes the Pacific coastline. A large number of rivers and streams carry alluvial gold and silver with them. Colombia has only 1% of the earth's surface but on the Pacific coast the location consists for 10% of the fauna and flora, 1.721 bird species studied and 49.000 different plant species. The highlight of any visit is to observe the humpback whales nearby Nuquí and Bahía Solano. Every year from July to late September, they come to give birth. A breathtaking experience, if you can observe these creatures just a few feet from your boat. You also find here the marine turtles which live in their natural habitat. The majority of the population is dark-skinned and maintains the lifestyles of their ancestors. Some of them live in indigenous tribes like the Embera, Waunan and Awa still isolated in the jungle. They preserve their customs and traditions almost untouched by outside influences.

Pacific Coast - Package: Eco-Lodge El Cantil - 03 days / 02 nights

South of Nuquí, at about 35 minutes by boat, your Eco-Lodge is located in front of the ocean with a marvellous view, immersed in the jungle surrounded by numerous streams of fresh water. Here you have the possibility to enjoy nature, sport fishing, surfing, and whale sighting (during July until September).

Day 01 Eco-Lodge El Cantil (-/-/D)

Arrival and welcome at the airport of Nuquí. Take a short walk to embark and drive with a power boat towards your Eco-Lodge.
